1955-1959: Department of Sociology, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia

1953-1955: Department of Sociology, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine

Major Fields of Interest

My primary interest is in developing sociological explanations of how society shapes sexual customs, and also how it shapes gender roles, and family life. These explanations can throw light on possible resolutions of the myriad of controversial social problems related to these areas.

Summary of Research Projects

My publications both before and after my retirement are covered in the next section and they will afford the best insight into my research activities. All of my research projects are theory oriented. I have derived my theoretical explanations both inductively and deductively. Below, starting with my earliest work, are the major research foci of my exploratory efforts.:

The socio-cultural sources of American premarital sexual attitudes

The socio-cultural factors that guide the developmental path of love relationships

Similarities and differences in the cross cultural structure/function of the family institution

The socio-cultural determinants of dyadic commitment in early marriage

The socio-cultural causes of premarital contraceptive behavior

Comparison of gender roles and sexuality in Sweden and America

The socio-cultural factors predicting extramarital sexual attitudes

Similarities and differences of the socio-cultural linkages of sexuality in human societies

Traditional sexual standards and beliefs as causes of our major societal sexual problems

Analysis & evaluation of the scientific approach to human sexuality in the last 50 years with a focus on building sociological theory and applying it to our society's sexual problems.

My earliest research concerning premarital sexuality in our country was financed by three grants from the National Institute of Mental Health (1960-1964). The other research projects listed above were supported by a total of twelve other modest grants.

Teaching and Service aspects of my career are important and will be covered in other parts of this vita.

PART THREE: TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Courses Taught

I have taught many courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. Most of these have been in the areas of sexuality, family and gender. In these and all my courses I emphasized areas of theory and research issues, cross cultural and historical aspects, and social problems.

Here is a list of some of the titles of the courses I have taught between 1953 and 1996:

America's Sexual Crisis
 Cross Cultural Construction of Sexuality
 Seminar in Human Sexuality
 Sociological Theory and Research on Sexuality

Problems of American Families
 New Family Forms
 Cross Cultural Family Systems
 Theory and Research in the Family

Contemporary American Sociological Theory
 Sociological Research
 Sweden: Social Structure and Change
 Seminar in Social Issues & Social Policies
 Social Problems

Introduction to Anthropology
 Introduction to Sociology

Chairing Graduate Students:

I supervised graduate students at both the University of Iowa from 1961 to 1969 and at the University of Minnesota from the fall of 1969 to the summer of 1996 when I retired. Thirty three of my students at these two Universities received their MA &/or Ph.D. degrees. I have also served on the committees of many other graduate students in sociology and on committees for graduate students in a number of other departments, such as Family Social Science, Geography, and History, as well as on committees evaluating graduate students at other universities here or abroad.

Supervising Undergraduate's Work:

From 1990-1996 I supervised eight undergraduate students in the completion of their senior honors theses and I served as a member of the committees of a number of other senior students. In the summer of 1991 I worked with the University Minorities Scholars' Development Program and served as a mentor for an undergraduate minority sociology student (Michele Gravenish) to help prepare her for entering graduate school. In 1992 she was awarded a three year scholarship at the University of Chicago graduate sociology program. Also, in the winter and spring of 1994 I worked with one of our senior majors (Grant Snyder) on a UROP grant research.

Teaching Evaluations and Awards:

In May of 1995 the undergraduate and graduate students in Sociology awarded me the Faculty Mentoring Award. This is an award given to one of the faculty whom the students believe has shown "outstanding commitment to student development."

At both the University of Iowa and the University of Minnesota I have been nominated for Distinguished Teacher Awards. Over the years, student evaluations of my courses have given me scores that consistently ranked me among the top two or three professors in the department. Also, in our department's annual faculty merit review of teaching I have consistently ranked at or close to the top.

PART FOUR: PROFESSIONAL TALKS, AWARDS, ELECTIONS, AND SERVICES

Professional Talks

Before retiring in June 1996, I had presented about 600 talks in the U.S. and Abroad. About 60% of my talks were at other universities or professional conventions. The other 40% were to civic groups, radio and television shows, or talks on my own campus. I still do talks but far fewer than before retiring.

Awards and Honors

University of Minnesota, Sociology Department, Graduate Students' Faculty Mentoring Award, "for providing exceptional support and commitment to graduate and undergraduate students," 1995.

American Association for Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists (AASECT) Award "for leadership, pioneering vision and expertise that have benefited the field of human sexuality and AASECT," 1993.

Certificate from Governor Carlson and Commissioner of Health Marschall "in recognition of excellent work as Chair of the Minnesota's Planning Committee for the founding of an Institute for Child and Adolescent Sexual Health," 1993.

Recipient of the Society for the Scientific Study of Sexuality Alfred Kinsey Award for "outstanding contributions to the understanding of human sexuality," 1990.

Recipient of Honorary Membership in the Polish Academy of Sexual Science for "internationally recognized outstanding contributions to sexual research," 1989.

Recipient of the Society for the Scientific Study of Sexuality Mid-continent Region's Award "in recognition of outstanding contributions to the scientific study of sex," 1985.

Recipient of the Ernest W. Burgess Award, 1984, from the National Council on Family Relations, for "continuous and meritorious contributions to theory and research in the family field."

Recipient of the Distinguished Scientific Achievement Award, 1982, for "outstanding contributions to the field of sexual science." Presented by the Society for the Scientific Study of Sexuality.

Recipient of the Reuben Hill Award for the "outstanding research and theory article of 1980 in the field of marriage and the family." Presented by the National Council on Family Relations for my May 1980 article on extramarital sexual permissiveness (written with Ron Anderson and G.C. Sponaugle).

Voted by a random sample of the members of the Family Section of the American Sociological Association as one of the most important theorists in the family area (Cited in: Journal of Marriage and the Family, February 1977, and also cited in the February 1998 special issue on theory of the Journal of Sex Research.)

Invited to be a Visiting Research Professor, Uppsala University, Uppsala, Sweden for the year 1975-1976.

Charter member, 1974, of the International Academy of Sex Research.

Voted to membership, August 1972, in the Sociological Research Association, an honorific national association then limited to 150 members of the American Sociological Association. Election is based on making a "significant contribution to sociological research and ... advancing sociological knowledge."

I was one of three awardees to receive the first Educational Foundation for Human Sexuality Award given in June 1970 by Montclair State College in N.J. The award was: "For outstanding contributions to the advancement of public understanding in the field of human sexuality." The other two awardees were Alan Guttmacher and Wardell Pomeroy.

The Sexuality Information and Education Council of the United States (SIECUS), in January of 1969 presented me with a Citation "in recognition of distinguished service" on the Board of that organization from 1966-1969.

Elected to a fellow in the Society for the Scientific Study of Sexuality in 1966 for "having made significant contributions to the field of sexual research and knowledge."

Received a Danforth Seminar Award in the summer of 1958 to participate in a two-week seminar at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, on "Interpretations of Religion in Sociological Theory."

Charter member of the Society for the Scientific Study of Sexuality, 1957.

Advisory and Consultant Groups

Member of the Advisory Board of the Magnus Hirschfeld Archive for Sexual Science, organized by Erwin Haerberle at Humboldt University in Berlin, German. This is the largest sexual science website in existence. This position began in April 2004 and continues as of 2015.

Member: Office of population Affairs, HHS, Surgeon General David Satcher, Invitational Conference on "Promoting Responsible Sexual Behaviors." The first meeting was at Newport, RI, December 12-14, 1999 and the second meeting was in Airlie, Virginia in July 2000.

Chair of Taskforce on Establishing a Sexual Science Ph.D degree. Both the board of AASECT and SSSS voted to establish this taskforce. I was chair of the taskforce from November 1998 to November 1999 and we were able to get the Kinsey Institute to begin work on developing a Ph.D. program in Sexual Science that would be multidisciplinary, use faculty from other universities, and stress a broadly conceived scientific approach. That effort is aimed at developing a Ph.D. degree program in Sexual Science at Indiana University and other fully accredited universities as soon as is academically and politically possible. As of 2015 two such universities have established Ph.D. degrees in the study of human sexuality: Widener University in Chester, Pennsylvania and the California Institute of Integral Studies in San Francisco.

Chair of State Planning Committee: Appointed by Governor Carlson of Minnesota. I chaired the Planning Committee for Establishing An Institute of Child and Adolescent Sexual Health, 1992-93. The committee was successful and the Institute was founded and incorporated in July 1993.

Departmental Committees and Service

I chaired three committees in my last year at the University, 1995-96. Over the years, I have chaired virtually every committee in the department and many of them more than once. I have been elected three consecutive times as the representative of the full professors on our departmental Executive Committee and in my last year I also once again Chaired the Family, Gender and Sexuality Area Group of our Department.

I was the Director of the Family Study Center, 1969-1974. The position involved administering and applying for research grants and graduate student training grants, as well as organizing teaching programs involving faculty and graduate students predominantly in the Sociology Department. In 1971, together with Reuben Hill, we obtained a five year renewal of our graduate student training grant from the U.S. Government. In 1972 and 1973 the University of Minnesota supported my application for two Hill Visiting Fellowships for the Family Study Center: Professor Jan Trost of Sweden (1972) and Professor Gunter Schmidt of Germany (1973).
